Suspicious death declared a homicide

Crime. Man charged with second-degree murder after stabbing

Halifax police say a young man who died in a west-end home was the victim of a murder.

Police spent most of Easter Sunday gathering evidence at 6257 Seaforth St., where officers responded around 4:20 a.m. to find the body of a 20-year-old man who had been stabbed to death.

Halifax Regional Police Const. Pierre Bourdages said officers had been called to the same area less than an hour earlier for reports of a disturbance.

"The officers located several people in the street, but there was no report of an assault and no one wished for police action," he said.

Officers left around 4 a.m., but returned 20 minutes later after someone inside the Seaforth Street home called 911 to report a stabbing.

Police found the victim's body inside and arrested a 21-year-old man without incident.

Vincent James Steele of Halifax has been charged with second-degree murder. He's in custody pending a court appearance on Tuesday.

Bourdages couldn't confirm reports from neighbours that a party was taking place in the house, but he said the stabbing is believed to be related to the initial disturbance.

"The details are part of the investigation, but we believe the accused was known to the victim," he said.

He said the accused is also known to police.

The victim's name will not be released until next of kin have been notified.

Members of the quiet neighbourhood were shocked by the crime.

Jacob Young, who resides in the apartment next to where the victim was found, said the people who live at the home are "pretty sketchy" but relatively quiet.

Young said he's had a conflict with one of the residents before, and he wasn't surprised that other neighbours suspect the tenants of drug activity.

"I hate feeling unsafe in my own apartment, and this really just puts the cherry on the cake for me," Young said.

Goodbye skis, hello golf clubs?

Fingers crossed. Sunshine, springlike temps hint at a possible end to chilly, dreary weather

KAYLA

A balmy, sunny Easter weekend had most winter-weary Halifax residents hoping that a dismal snow season is firmly in the rear-view mirror — and local ski hills and at least one golf course are taking action accordingly.

Fox Hollow opened its greens on Friday, and the general manager said the popular Stewiacke course was teeming with more than 200 eager golfers.

"It's great to have the ball rolling," Christopher Gourley said.

The course opened on March 16 last year, when the temperature soared to 22 C, but Gourley said heavier snow this year put the course two weeks behind schedule.

Ashburn Golf Club's general manager, Gordie Smith, said his course is a few weeks behind as well, but opening day isn't far off.

"It can turn around quick with the nice weather," he said.

Environment Canada's latest three-month forecast, released on Sunday, suggests more good weather is in store for April, May and June. The Halifax area is expecting above-average temperatures and normal precipitation, like most of the province.

February and March were both slightly warmer than normal, but the weather agency's website suggests total precipitation was lower both months than the average.

However, Leslie Wilson,

general manager at Wentworth Ski Hill, said there was enough winter weather to open early and keep the hill in operation for a full 99 days.

The season wraps up on Monday with a last day of skiing and snowboarding.

"We're ending off really strong," Wilson said. "It's been a hopping spot this Easter."

Nova Scotians looking ahead to summer can soon start making those plans: The province will open its reservation system for provincial camping parks on Tuesday.

A perfect day to ponder the way things are

Warm weather brought people out to enjoy a new art installation on the Halifax waterfront on Sunday afternoon. The work, which features three sculptures doing "human" things, is titled The Way Things Are. It's the creation of Canadian artists Chris Hanson and Hendrika Sonnenberg, and was made possible by a collaboration between Waterfront Development Corporation and the Art Gallery of Nova Scotia. It will be in its new home for a year. JEFF HARPER/METRO

Accident. Grass fire destroys trailer in Higginsville

A mishap with a grass fire sparked a larger fire that destroyed an abandoned trailer in Higginsville.

Halifax fire crews were called to the property at 180 Barren Rd. at about 5 p.m. on Sunday and arrived to find the trailer engulfed in flames.

"There's some other trailers around here, but it's in a backyard, so it's out of the way. There's no other structures that are in danger by any means," said Cmdr. Dave Slaunwhite of Division 5.

Slaunwhite said the interior of the trailer, which was used mostly for storage, was gutted, but no one was hurt.

He urged caution for anyone burning outdoor debris, but said no one was at fault in the minor incident.

"It was just an unfortunate accident, that's it," he said. "They were burning some grass and it got underneath the trailer and caught it on fire."

Community chips in to help upgrade, modernize Dartmouth group home for young men

The renovation of a Dartmouth home is about more than just pretty finishes — it's a project five years in the making that will benefit countless young men in years to come.

Work has just wrapped up on Hawthorne House, the oldest facility of the HomeBridge Youth Society, and the executive director says her relief is beyond words.

"I can't tell you," said Linda Wilson. "It's a big checkmark on my list."

The 100-year-old house at the corner of Hawthorne and Prince Albert streets has been expanded and upgraded to better serve the six young men placed there. The $300,000 renovation provided key upgrades to the home's plumbing and electrical systems, and it also transformed the interior with the addition of 800 square feet of recreation and programming space.

"(The staff's) favourite part is the island that's in the kitchen now," Wilson said. "There's some stools around it, and the kids are ... all sitting together with the staff, peeling the potatoes and talking about their day."

The interior renovations also gave each boy his own room, with a desk, chair and a wall of chalkboard paint for scribbling.

Wilson said the transformation has resulted in small, but significant shifts in behaviour among the boys currently living there.

"They're taking their boots off at the door and nobody asked them to," she said. "They've asked for bedroom slippers. I can't even believe it."

Although the actual construction took about six months, Wilson said raising the money took far longer — about four and a half years, in total.

She said it happened in no small part because of generosity from the local community, which looked beyond the stereotypes typically attached to kids in care.

"We weren't there at Christmastime, but we had some neighbours send a plant and some baked goods to where the boys were temporarily, which was so kind," she said.

Community residents, along with local organizations and some corporations, also chipped in with funds and time to help with painting and other finishing touches.

"I've been doing this work for a long time, and I don't know if I've ever been involved in such a project that, I bet you, there were hundreds of people who made this project happen," Wilson said. "It was wonderful."

Extra programming

More than just a place to sleep

The kids who come to stay at Hawthorne House have the chance to take part in a range of extra programming that's fun and a little instructive.

HomeBridge offers music therapy, art education and circus skill instruction through its arts program, as well as tai chi and yoga.

"What these extra programs do is they provide the children with experiences of success and it builds their confidence a bit," said executive director Linda Wilson.

Kids who put in a minimum number of hours in the program will get educational credit from the Halifax Regional School Board.

Missing man may be linked to ferry mishap

RCMP may have a lead in the case of a vehicle that plunged off the end of the English-town ferry into St. Anns Bay a week ago.

Jerry Hengeveld, 81, from Waterville, N.S., was last seen by his family on March 24.

He drives a 2007 silver-grey Toyota Camry, which was seen in Baddeck on March 25. A car partially matching that description went off the ferry later that day. There's been no sign of Hengeveld's car since then.

"Baddeck RCMP are working with Kings County RCMP and can confirm that the missing man from Kings County, Jerry Hengeveld and his vehicle, were seen in the Baddeck Irving station on March 25," Const. Scott MacRae said on Saturday.

However, since a car has not been recovered, police cannot confirm if the vehicle that went off the ferry belongs to Hengeveld.

RCMP divers were supposed to resume their search Saturday morning but ice conditions, which have plagued the area since mid-week, continue to hamper the search efforts.

"The only reason we're not diving today is because the ice is still in the area," Staff Sgt. Craig Yorke said on Saturday.

"The ice is straight out to the mouth of the sea. The channel was starting to free itself up there but still it's back and forth because of the current."

On Sunday, MacRae said

the RCMP dive unit is looking at conditions on a day-to-day basis. He said the next window of opportunity to search the bay may be as late as Tuesday.

Police say it won't be possible to positively identify the victim in this case until the vehicle is retrieved from the bottom of the bay.

HMCS Toronto seized some 500 kilograms of heroin from a boat in the Indian Ocean last week, according to the Department of National Defence.

The drugs were found on Friday after a naval boarding party searched the vessel as part of a security operation.

HMCS Toronto's commanding officer said it is one of the largest heroin seizures in a maritime environment.

Cmdr. David Patchell said the bust doesn't just keep drugs off the street, but also hurts the finances of terrorist organizations.

Environmentalism. Canada lauded for tough stance on Arctic pollution

Canada is winning a rare bit of environmental praise from the international community for its stance on pollution from shipping in Arctic waters.

Documents show Canada is pushing hard to outlaw the discharge of oily wastes or garbage anywhere in the North.

Canada's proposal, during negotiations for a mandatory global shipping code in the Arctic, has won the support of several countries including Germany and France — nations that often criticize Canada over climate change and management of wildlife.

Canadian negotiators proposed very high standards, based on legislation that has been in place since 1970.

"The Canadian and Arctic experience demonstrates that a zero discharge standard is practicable," says the proposal.

"The Canadian experience also shows that it is not a significant barrier to cost-effective shipping, for purposes ranging from community supply to resource development and limited but growing through traffic."

Victim in mall shooting raided home as a minor

The victim in Toronto's latest homicide was involved in a violent home invasion in Windsor, Ont., in 2005.

Michael Nguyen, 23, was shot and killed outside of a Sears at Yorkdale Mall on Saturday, shortly after 8 p.m.

Police said Nguyen was known to them and released a photo of him Sunday. Windsor lawyer Frank Miller recognized him as a former client, whom he represented in relation to a home invasion.

One of Nguyen's co-defendants was Qoheleth Chong. A man by the same name was shot and killed in Toronto last November. As of press time, Metro could not confirm they are the same person.

In 2008, Nguyen pleaded guilty on several charges and received an adult sentence of five years. He only served about two-and-a-half years in custody because of a sentencing credit.

Miller said there was evidence Nguyen was part of a gang called the Asian Assassins.

"There was a couple ... living in an older, not-very-wealthy part of Windsor," recalled Miller. "They came to the door ... and there was a pizza delivery man there. ... He said they hadn't ordered in and when he turned back there was a guy with a shotgun."

Three minors, including Nguyen, and one adult entered the home armed and bound the woman and the man who lived there with zip ties, said Miller.

"Before they found the woman and put her in zip ties she called 911," he said.

The man had $20,000 in the home in small bills, which he later said had come from gambling, said Miller.

Police arrested the four assailants, recovered four guns they had hidden under a bed and found a fifth gun suspended by a piece of wire in a toilet tank.

Miller believes the man may have been targeted.

"It seemed odd that there were four assailants and five guns and it seemed odd to me that the gun would be suspended by a piece of wire under a toilet tank when the other guns were hidden under the bed," said Miller. "It seemed odd when you added the $20,000 in cash."

Nukes are 'nation's life,' not on bargaining table: North Korea

Threats. Analysts say attack on U.S. is unlikely, but situation could escalate into localized skirmishes

A top North Korean decision-making body issued a pointed warning Sunday, saying that nuclear weapons are "the nation's life" and will not be traded even for "billions of dollars."

The comments came in a statement released after North Korean leader Kim Jong Un presided over the plenary meeting of the central committee of the ruling Workers' Party.

The meeting, which set a "new strategic line" calling for building both a stronger economy and nuclear arsenal, comes amid a series of near-daily threats from Pyongyang in recent weeks, including a vow to launch nuclear strikes on the U.S. and a warning Saturday that the Korean Peninsula was in a "state of war."

Pyongyang is angry over annual U.S.-South Korean military drills and a new round of UN sanctions that followed its Feb. 12 nuclear test, the country's third.

Analysts see a full-scale

North Korean attack as unlikely and say the threats are more likely efforts to provoke softer policies toward Pyongyang from a new government in Seoul, to win diplomatic talks with Washington that could get the North more aid, and to solidify the young North Korean leader's image and military credentials at home. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brinkmanship?

Justifying its nuke pursuit

North Korea has called the U.S. nuclear arsenal a threat to its existence since the 1950-53 Korean War, which ended in a truce, not a peace treaty, leaving the peninsula still technically at war.

Pyongyang justifies its own nuclear pursuit in large part on that perceived U.S. threat.

While analysts call North Korea's threats largely brinkmanship, there is some fear that a localized skirmish might escalate. Seoul has vowed to respond harshly should North Korea provoke its military.

Influx of Syrian refugees. Canada announces $13M in aid for Jordan

Canada is giving the Middle Eastern country of Jordan an additional $13 million to help deal with a crush of Syrian refugees.

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird announced the aid after meeting with Jordanian officials, including the country's King Abdullah, on Sunday.

"Jordan has consistently demonstrated a leadership role in the pursuit of a just and lasting peace in the Middle East, and it continues to lead in the face of the ongoing crisis in Syria," Baird said in a statement.

Canada has already given Jordan $11.5 million to help deal with more than 380,000 Syrian refugees who have arrived there in the last two years.

The United Nations estimates more than one million people have fled the ongoing violence in Syria, and millions more are internally displaced.

Baird says the new funds will help deal with the immediate humanitarian and security needs created by the influx. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Exxon Mobil pipeline spills Canadian crude

Mayflower, Ark.
Cleanup crews trying to prevent oil from reaching nearby lake

Exxon Mobil Corp. says crews are working to contain and clean up an oil spill near Mayflower, Ark., after its Pegasus pipeline ruptured Friday afternoon. The pipeline carries Canadian heavy crude oil from Patoka, Ill., to refineries on the Texas Gulf coast.

Exxon Mobil issued a release that said the company was responding to a spill of more than 10,000 barrels, and that some 4,500 barrels of oil and water had been recovered.

The company said the 20-inch pipeline had been shut down as crews tried to prevent the spilled oil from reaching a nearby lake. It said cleanup operations were being co-ordinated with the Department of Emergency Management and other local authorities, and that the cause of the spill was being investigated.

Last week federal regulators proposed that Exxon Mobil pay $1.7 million US in civil penalties for safety violations linked to a pipeline rupture that spilled an estimated 238,000 litres of crude oil into Montana's scenic Yellowstone River in July 2011.

The spill fouled approximately 110 kilometres of the Yellowstone River's banks, killing fish and wildlife and prompting a massive cleanup.

The latest spill comes as proponents of the proposed Keystone XL pipeline have been trying to convince Washington to give the project the green light. Opponents of TransCanada Corp.'s plan to pipe Alberta oilsands bitumen to the U.S. Gulf Coast denounce it as an environmental catastrophe in the making. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Big Tech bets on big perks

Apple's planned ring-shaped, gleaming "spaceship headquarters" in Cupertino, Calif., will include a world-class auditorium and an orchard for engineers to wander.

Google's new campus will feature walkways angled to force accidental encounters. Facebook, while putting final touches on a Disney-inspired campus including a Main Street with a barbecue shack, sushi house and bike shop, is already planning an even larger, more exciting new campus.

More than ever before, Silicon Valley firms want their workers at work. Yahoo CEO Marissa Mayer has gone so far as to ban working from home, and many more offer prodigious incentives for coming in to the office, such as free meals, massages and gyms.

This spring, as the tech industry is soaring out of the Great Recession, plans are in the works for a flurry of massive, perk-laden headquarters.

"We're seeing the mature technology companies trying to energize their work environments, getting rid of cube farms and investing in facilities to compete for talent," said Kevin Schaeffer, a principal at architecture and design firm Gensler in San Jose, Calif. "That's caused a huge transition in the way offices are laid out."

Publishing. Free press returns to Myanmar

For most people in Myanmar, it will be a novelty when privately run daily newspapers hit the streets on Monday. Many weren't even born when the late dictator Ne Win imposed a state monopoly on the daily press in the 1960s.

He acknowledges there are innumerable challenges ahead, but said he is ready to face them "in the name of freedom of press." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Selling Old Gold and Silver Jewellery? Common Sense Is Worth Its Weight in Gold.

Skyrocketing gold and silver prices has many consumers wondering how much their old or broken gold jewellery is worth. The question you should be asking yourself is: where do you go to ensure you receive a fair offer? There are plenty of options but which ones pass the common sense test?

Option #1: Antique roadshows and Mall Kiosks. Inflated Promises. False Advertising.

Anyone can post really high payout prices. There are no laws to protect unsuspecting consumers from misleading ads that promise to pay outrageous and unrealistic prices. Unscrupulous companies use them to lure people in, then adjust weights, inaccurately evaluate material (eg. say something is 10kt when it's actually 14kt). The bottom line --people end up with less money in their pocket, not more.

Option #2: Pawnshops and Coin Shows. Hope for the Best.

Most consumers feel uneasy about walking into a pawnshop with their jewellery.

And these coins shows are making exaggerated payout claims to lure you in. The truth is, several of these companies have received harsh criticism from consumer advocacy groups because of their notoriously shady sales tactics and low payouts. So, if those ads featuring cash waving "customers" send a chill down your spine, it's for good reason.

Option #3: Recycle Frog. You Be the Judge.

COMMUNITY HUB NOT A BAD IDEA

Richmond, the primary-to-nine school I attended in north-end Halifax, is long gone.

Not quite true.

The oldest section, ironically the one rebuilt after the 1917 Halifax Explosion, now serves as a family court building. The other two wings, hastily tacked on after the Second World War to accommodate then-exponentially expanding baby boom babies, were unceremoniously levelled after the wave crested, young families moved to the suburbs and Halifax finally outgrew its wasteful tradition of parallel Protestant-Catholic schools.

I can't help thinking about Richmond's fate whenever the province's annual March Madness Educational Demolition Derby enters its final fevered days.

Last week, with today's looming deadline for determining which schools no longer make the Survivor cut, provincial school boards voted to shutter at least five schools, amalgamate two others and put up 14 — or more; who can keep count? — for review in the next year.

URBAN COMPASS
Stephen Kimber

Which means more families will suffer through the same gut-wrenching process next year.

The issues are easy enough to catalogue: declining birth rates, rural depopulation, pinched provincial budgets, delayed-until-it's-too-late building maintenance, continuing collapse of rural economies, more budget cuts.

The answers ... less so.

While there is a growing consensus that big is not necessarily better — particularly now that technology can connect students in the smallest rural schools with the Internet's vast, comprehensive database of facts, ideas, life — the reality is cash-strapped school boards currently spend $100 million a year just to heat, light and maintain empty classrooms in more-than-half-empty school buildings.

One promising suggestion, touted by some parents and community groups, calls for under-used schools to become fully utilized community hubs, with classrooms sharing space with rent-paying community groups, non-profits, government offices, even businesses.

"We have to view these buildings as an asset and not a liability," says CUPE Nova Scotia president Danny Cavanagh, who believes they could become "community centrepieces."

While the department of education is experimenting with a modest version of the idea — SchoolsPlus combines government services with classrooms — it only currently plans to implement it in four schools a year. That's not nearly enough.

The next March Madness is less than a year away.

While there may be no easy answers, the current answer is no answer at all.

RE: Sadistic, tyrannical, unstable ... psychiatrist reveals the dark side of tragic Ashley Smith, a teenager who killed herself in her jail cell, published March 26

I was absolutely disgusted by what Dr. Penn stated: only top-quality, sustained psychological care could have helped Ashley Smith's extreme problems. At that facility they no doubt use the standard way of treating patients.

Everyone assumes that psychiatrists are helpful, but in reality their goal is to make patients feel content and getting to the base problem. Instead, when people are down you must push them far into the zone of happiness, and show them that past feelings and thoughts have created every situation in their life. Every person on Earth has the opportunity to live a happy life. So why are we throwing people in jail cells and feeding them harmful drugs?

A poster says 1,000 words

Being that Mad Men is a show about advertising, it's always been important that it have great advertising itself, and the promotional image for season six is no different — though it does break from the show's previous style in a very striking way. For the image, Mad Men turned to 75-year-old illustrator Brian Sanders, who created a lush, period-appropriate image with two Don Drapers and plenty of suggestive imagery. "I know people are looking for meaning and everything. There is a lot of meaning in it," series creator Matt Weiner concedes. "It came from a dream. I had this dream — and it was not Don, it was me, but a lot of stuff is like that." So what was that dream — and this season's promo poster — about exactly? Never a fan of divulging specifics, Weiner at least offers that the focus is on "the anxiety that is created by — in all of these characters — wondering why they are the way they are," he says.

The Internet can make a man go mad

Mad Men creator Matt Weiner's friends and family have banned him from reading negative criticism

NED

Metro World News in Hollywood

A word of caution to angry Internet commenters and recappers: Mad Men creator Matt Weiner knows what you're writing about his show. Or at least he used to until he was banned from visiting them by his wife and writing staff.

"This is a terrible job for someone as oversensitive as I am. When I was on The Sopranos, it didn't even exist," Weiner says.

"I try and stay away from it. What usually happens now is somebody — a friend — will send me something. And it's still this addiction."

To Weiner, it's pointless to fight the compulsion to seek out criticism.

"This is human nature," he says.

"There's two jars in the next room. One of them is filled with little fortune cookie fortunes, and the other one has two of them in it.

"(The big jar) is the good things about you, (the little jar) is the bad things about you that people have written. Go in there. You get to pick one piece of paper.

What's in store for Jon Hamm in the next season of Mad Men? HANDOUT

Sticks and stones

"The immediate response is, you know, hatred, anger, disgust, betrayal. And I kind of am like, I can't believe I let these strangers hurt me."

Mad Men creator Matt Weiner on getting upset over criticism of his show on the web

You pick the bad one. I will keep looking until I find something bad. I don't even know how it works."

For an example, he offers an episode from last season,

Signal 30, that garnered some reactions he didn't appreciate.

"It was Vincent (Kart-heimer's) performance, you know, when he's in the elevator and says, 'We're supposed to be friends. I have nothing,'" Weiner remembers.

"That to me is like the saddest thing I ever wrote. I was very emotional about it, and when it aired people are like, 'A Pete story. I hate that.' So I just try and stay away from that stuff as much as possible."

Hence the banning. And he's been good for the most part, but he did slip up a few times last season.

"I really was off it for a while, and then (the season five episode) the Suitcase happened and everyone was like, 'You've got to read this. You have to read what people said about this thing,'" he says.

"So I read it and I loved that episode, but the episode that was on the week after that was actually my favourite of the season, the Summer Man. It's a very emotional story for me. So of course I read (the reactions) the next week and it's, like, brutal.

"The immediate response is, you know, hatred, anger, disgust, betrayal. And I kind of am like, I can't believe I let these strangers hurt me."

With season six debuting, maybe it's time for Weiner's wife and staff to look into some parental controls for his web browser.

"Mother and daughter are doing great." Though the parents are no longer together, Renner had made a point of putting the mother-to-be up in his Los Angeles home as she awaited the birth. "They used to date but it wasn't serious," a source says, adding that Renner was "being ultra-secretive about it, but she has been going on about her life and not hiding it."

Long waits

Start a story, kill some time

I came up with this little trick during one of my son's many visits to one of his specialists at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children.

All you do is tell a story. One person starts the story by telling the first line and it then moves to the next person who continues the story along by adding another line.

You continue until you feel the story is complete.

It helps kill time during those long waits.

Feeling exhausted? Laugh it off

Handling sleep deprivation. Here are some tips for surviving the day after the kids have kept you up all night

ANDREA NAIR
YummyMummyClub.ca

As I drag myself off the floor where my three-year-old and five-year-old are happily playing, I am trying to summon motivation to help stop feeling sorry for my tired body that was kept up last night by a feverish child. Life has to go on today — no calling in sick here.

How many of you are nodding with me?

I am making this list to help myself today because I managed in the past to get through many sleepless nights, and the following sleepy days.

My goal is to make it through intact and not let my tiredness turn me into a jerk.

Whether you are at work or at home, use any of these caffeine-free tips that suit you to help through your sleepy day.

1) Create a safe zone for the kids and then curl up near them for a power nap.

When the kids were younger,

Quote

My goal today is to make it through intact and not let my tiredness turn me into a jerk.

I would barricade them in a small area and fall asleep on the floor beside them. Now I can sleep through a blaring TV or Lego dismantling.

2) Stop telling yourself you are tired.

Positive thinking will make a big difference. Put on your glass-half-full goggles. There have been many studies that demonstrate humans can do just fine on even four hours of sleep if they need to.

Remind yourself of this all day.

3) Don't sit around too much, and try to get outside.

I find I am more tired when I am sitting.

If I take the boys outside or to play somewhere else, I often forget how tired I am. But don't push yourself too hard for multiple days in a row.

A day or two here or there of pushing yourself onto your feet will be OK.

If this is a repeated pattern, you run the risk of harming your health.

4) Do something that will make you laugh because laughing releases the same tension as tears.

I do feel like crying — all day. So laughing is a much better option! My choices are usually: air guitar to my favourite songs, hanging with friends, watching a funny video.

5) Do some yoga and/or meditation.

Inversion poses are super for waking the body and mind.

If I start to feel fuzzy, I do a sun-salutation series or meditate for a couple minutes.

6) Drink water with lemon and eat real food.

Junk food is not only bad for you, it often makes you sleepy.

7) Have a shower, do your hair and wear nice clothes.

For some reason I feel better when I'm not in a pony tail and saggy-butt grey sweat pants.

I need to put my psychotherapist hat on and say that if sleepless nights are a chronic problem, seek professional help either through a trained child sleep expert (my go-to girl there is Alanna McGinn) or a trained counsellor.

Use your stroller to create strong, toned legs

Get out into the world and tone up. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Early spring can often be absolutely gorgeous and you can take advantage of those occasional warm spring days to do a little stroller fitness on your own.

Warm up

Start by walking briskly. Find a quiet street or park with paved paths so you can maintain your preferred speed without crashing into pedestrians. Few pedestrians enjoy that. Walk or jog for five to 10 minutes until you have broken a sweat and feel warm and slightly breathless.

Strength

Walk or jog one to two blocks (or about one minute) between each of the following exercises.

Walking stroller lunge and pulse.

With both hands on the stroller and elbows slightly bent, take a large step with your left foot and drop into a lunge position until your left thigh is roughly parallel with the ground. From the lowest position you can maintain, pulse up one inch and back down, then step up and move forward with your right foot this time. Continue walking until you have performed 20 lunges, alternating as you would while walking.

Stroller butt kick

With both hands on the stroller and elbows slightly bent, jog and kick your heels up to tap your bum (or get as close to tapping as you can), squeezing your hamstrings. Try leaning slightly forward and staying on the balls of your feet to kick faster and harder. Continue jogging forward until you have performed 30 kicks on each leg, or 60 total.

Bonus points

Every time you pass a wall or bench, stop to perform five to 10 push ups for some upper body strength training, too.

This is a wrap I developed for the Pickle Barrel chain of restaurants in Toronto. When the customers want a healthier wrap, this is what they order. The spinach, chicken and hummus combo is a winner.

Homemade hummus has fewer calories and less fat than the store-bought type.

1. Working with one at a time, pound the chicken breasts to an even 1/2-inch thickness between two sheets of waxed paper. Spray a non-stick grill pan with cooking oil and sauté the chicken for 8 minutes, or until no longer pink in the centre. Slice into thin strips.

2. Stir peppers, onion, feta, tomatoes, olives, oil, basil and garlic together in a large bowl.

3. Spread the hummus over the tortillas. Place the vegetable mixture over the hummus. Scatter the spinach leaves overtop and add the chicken. Roll the bottom of each tortilla up and over the filling, fold in both sides, and continue to roll up tightly. Cut each roll in half.

ROSE REISMAN'S COMPLETE LIGHT KITCHEN (WHITECAP BOOKS) BY ROSE REISMAN

This recipe serves eight. BRIAN MACDONALD, FROM ROSE REISMAN'S COMPLETE LIGHT KITCHEN.

Ingredients

- 8 oz skinless boneless chicken breast
- 1 cup thinly sliced green bell pepper
- 1 cup thinly sliced red bell pepper
- 1/3 cup thinly sliced red or sweet onion
- 1/3 cup low-fat feta cheese, crumbled
- 1/2 cup chopped rehydrated sun-dried tomatoes
- 1/3 cup diced black olives
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 1 1/2 tsp dried basil
- 1 1/2 tsp minced fresh garlic
- 2/3 cup hummus
- 4 large whole wheat tortillas, or flavour of your choice
- 1 cup baby spinach leaves

A burrito a day. . .

A staple in our house, these burritos are usually made on the weekend and then wrapped up individually and stashed into the freezer for busy weeknights. Not only are they fast and easy to make, they are fairly economical, healthy and filling for hungry teens.

1. In a large frying pan, sauté the onion in a little olive oil until softened, about 5 minutes. Add the jalapeno (if using) and sweet pepper, sautéing and stirring until softened as well. Push to the side of the pan, add a little bit more oil and then the ground beef. Continue to cook and stir until it's cooked through and no longer pink. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste, then chili powder, cumin and oregano.

2. Place the garlic clove, cilantro stalks, kidney beans, chili powder, cumin, salt, olive oil, zest from 1/2 lime, and juice from 1/2 lime in a food processor. Add about 2 tbsp of water and process until smooth. You can always add a little more water if you need to in order to moisten it or make it smooth enough to spread.

3. Lay the tortillas out on the counter in front of you. Divide the bean mixture evenly among the tortillas, placing a dollop in the centre of each. Divide the meat between the tortillas as well, mounding it on top of the bean paste.

4. Sprinkle Cheddar cheese on top of the bean mixture and meat. To roll up, take the tortilla and fold in the sides. Place the rolled tortillas in a large freezer bag in a single layer and seal. If you plan to eat the burritos immediately, instead of rolling them in cling wrap, place them seam side down in a greased baking dish. Bake for about 15 minutes in a 350 F oven until heated through.

So what's it like to work there?

Questions of culture.

Find a workplace that suits your personality and your passions

YLVA
VAN BUUREN
CareerBear.com

Corporate culture can be pretty far down on your priority list when you're in the midst of a job search, but don't underestimate its importance to your long-term satisfaction at a job, says Stefan Danis, CEO of Mandrake and NEXCareer.

Corporate culture refers to values, attitudes and behaviour of employees encouraged and supported by the organization.

The following questions can help determine the culture of an organization — and whether it is a good fit for your personality and work style. How you get the answers may take some detective work. Google the company, talk to employees you know who work there, if you have an on-site interview, arrive a little early and chat with the receptionist, and ask probing questions, at the appropriate time, during job interviews.

What stage is the firm at?

If it's a start-up, the culture is going to be fast-paced and probably entrepreneurial, which is a perfect fit if you're a high-energy sort, says Danis. If the company is in the midst of a turnaround, you're doing something on the clock. If the firm is sustaining success, the culture may be far more meas-

The good and the bad

What are people really saying?

If you're comfortable with the interviewer, ask more probing questions about what part of the work culture is not working so well. For example, the company is trying to hire more gen Xers and at the core, it has a traditional, inflexible work culture. Or, is it a high pressure workforce where employees are always exhausted?

ured.

What does the workspace look like?

When you walk through the office for an interview, for example, notice how people work. If they all have their own offices, the organization is likely hierarchical. If there is an open concept with employees working and overlapping physically, the culture is likely more collaborative. How are people dressed? Do they seem friendly and happy... or closed and self-important.

Is a team atmosphere encouraged?

Talk to employees you know at the company or check out bulletin boards, etc., to see if there are employee "events" such as "huddles" every morning or rallying lunches. Do company meetings occur off-site at weekend retreats? Is there regular correspondence to employees?

How is performance measured?

Is there a formal annual process for reviewing progress? Is it more of a casual "just in time" feedback, or is performance management seen as a tedious process?

"Some companies base merit increases on 'hard' accomplishments such as sales units while others measure 'softer' behaviours such as leadership skills and even reward them through a 360 feedback loop, where colleagues and stakeholders share their point of view on your style and how you go about your work," Danis says the latter would suggest an environment where a firm is actively encouraging a team agenda as opposed to highlighting individual talent.

Injury woes hit Crosby again

Sidney Crosby has a broken jaw and is out indefinitely after being hit in the mouth with a puck during a win against the New York Islanders on Saturday.

The Pittsburgh Penguins said on the team website Sunday that Crosby had surgery Saturday night, and there will be an update on his status later in the week.

Crosby, the NHL's leading scorer, was struck in the face during the first period of the Penguins' 2-0 win. Slow-motion replays showed multiple teeth flying out of his mouth after the puck struck him during his first shift. The team said Crosby had "major dental work" and will have more done later in the week.

The Penguins have won 15 straight games, and next play Buffalo on Tuesday.

Crosby has 56 points (15 goals, 41 assists) and holds a 10-point lead in the scoring race. He has not missed a game yet this season after being limited to 22 regular-season games over the previous two calendar years because of concussion-like symptoms and neck problems after absorbing big hits in consecutive games Jan. 1 and Jan. 5, 2011.

Midway through his comeback season, Crosby said he was feeling so good he "doesn't even think about" the risk of concussion or head or neck injury anymore after two years in which it dominated his life. Teammates expressed similar sentiments.

After Saturday's game, coach Dan Bylsma did not rule out the possibility Crosby would undergo evaluation for a concussion.

"I think every time that type of thing happens to a player you think of that," Bylsma said. "It doesn't matter who it is. ... You think about those things regardless of the player, yes."

MacKinnon says he has another level

QMJHL. With plenty at stake, the 17-year-old is putting everything on the line for a title

andrew.rankin@metronews.ca

Nathan MacKinnon accomplished exactly what he wanted to in the opening round of the playoffs.

Sure, the Halifax Mooseheads forward maintained his regular-season scoring touch by registering seven points in the Herd's four-game sweep of the Saint John Sea Dogs.

But the 17-year-old, bluechip prospect went into the postseason determined to raise his two-way play by engaging in a more relentless, physical game.

So far, so good.

The fact that the Mooseheads outscored the rebuilding Sea Dogs 25-4 tells part of the story.

"I tried to come in and do better in the faceoff circle. I wanted to be more physical and have a two-way presence and I think I did a solid job with that," MacKinnon said.

It's a philosophy that his top linemates have bought into as well.

"We're the best we can be when we're committed on both sides of the puck. Me, Jo [Drouin] and Marty [Frk] are all determined to keep that intensity going."

MacKinnon and the Mooseheads know they'll face a tougher challenge in the second round against Gatineau, which gets underway Friday.

"I'm really looking forward to the second-round when it's a little more emotional and the stakes are a little higher."

No Moosehead knows more about playoff intensity than forward Stephen MacAulay who won a Memorial Cup in 2011 and back-to-back President's Cups in 2011-12 with the Sea Dogs before being traded to the Herd in January.

"We're proud to win the first-round but we can't get too high," MacAulay said. "There's another team waiting for us next week. The target is still on our back. Everyone's coming for us."

But Mooseheads co-captain Stefan Fournier says the Herd will be primed and ready.

"We still have a lot of work to do, a lot of grinding until it's all done," Fournier said. "We'll get a good solid week of practice. There's nothing better than going into a game rested and fresh."

It's all set

Mooseheads to take on Gatineau in Round 2

The waiting game is over.

The Gatineau Olympiques will be the Halifax Mooseheads' second-round playoff opponent.

The matchup was solidified on Sunday evening after 13th seed Gatineau edged fourth seed Rimouski Oceanic 2-1 to seal the series upset win 4-2.

Gatineau and Halifax split their regular season matchups. Gatineau recorded a 6-1 victory over the Herd at the Metro Centre in September, while the Mooseheads returned the favour in November with a 5-1 win in Gatineau.

The Mooseheads will open the series at home on Friday and Saturday at the Metro Centre before the matchup shifts to Gatineau.

Tickets go on sale on Wednesday at 10 a.m. at all Ticket Atlantic outlets, online at ticketatlantic.com or by phone at 451-1221.

Canada's Jacobs remains unbeaten at worlds

Brad Jacobs and his Canadian rink got points for messy housekeeping on Sunday at the world men's curling championships.

The Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., skip remained unbeaten after two draws as he came back to beat Finland's Aku Kauste 8-6. Jacobs overcame an early 4-1 deficit by putting up plenty of junk instead of deploying his usual clean, takeout-based game.

"It wasn't a typical game for us," said Jacobs, who is competing at the worlds for the first time. "We like to try to build a lead and peel, as everyone knows."

"We did that in the first game (a win over China), but this game was totally the opposite. But it's nice to have a game like that, too, where you have to come back to win."

He and his rink of third Ryan Fry, second E.J. Harnden and lead Ryan Harnden forced Kauste to make several misses as his rink fell to 0-2.

Tennis. Andy Murray rallies past David Ferrer for Sony Open title

As a dramatic men's final at the Sony Open neared its conclusion in a winner-take-all tiebreaker, Andy Murray waged a 28-shot exchange with David Ferrer, who was left so exhausted by the rally he crumpled to the court.

CBS viewers missed it. They also missed seeing Murray accept the trophy after he erased a championship point Sunday and rallied past Ferrer 2-6, 6-4, 7-6 (1).

An 11:30 a.m. start on Easter turned out not to be early enough for CBS. The network cut away when the final went to the tiebreaker, switching to the tipoff of the NCAA tournament game between Michigan and Florida.

"It's obviously a shame that people didn't get to see the end of what I think was a pretty exciting match," Murray said. "But that's the way it goes sometimes."

Tennis Channel televised the end of the match, and CBS later showed a replay of match point.

"We stayed with tennis as long as we could," a CBS spokeswoman said.

The final was filled with grinding baseline rallies, in-

Cardinals will face Wichita State in the national semifinal on Saturday

With tears in their eyes and Kevin Ware in their hearts, there was no way Louisville was losing this game.

Russ Smith scored 23, Gorgui Dieng had 14 points, 11 rebounds and four blocks, and top-seeded Louisville put aside the shock from Ware's gruesome leg injury to earn a second straight trip to the Final Four with an 85-63 victory over Duke on Sunday afternoon.

As the final seconds ticked down, Chane Behanan put Ware's jersey on and stood at the end of the Louisville bench, screaming. Cardinals fans chanted "Kevin Ware! Kevin Ware!"

"We talked about it every timeout, 'Get Kevin home,'"

Quoted

"Remember the bone is six inches out of his leg, and all he's yelling is, 'Win the game, win the game.' I've never seen anything like that."

Louisville coach Rick Pitino on Kevin Ware, whose right leg snapped midway between his ankle and knee on a first-half shot block attempt Pitino said.

This was the first time Pitino and Mike Krzyzewski had met in the regional finals since the 1992 classic that ended with Christian Laettner's improbable buzzer-beater, a game now considered one of the best in NCAA tournament history.

This game will be remembered, too, but for a very different — and much more sombre — reason.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

Take what you desire rather than wait for someone to offer it to you. Whatever your number one ambition in life happens to be, that is what you should now be aiming for.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Usually you get your way through sheer force of personality but cosmic activity in the most sensitive area of your chart makes that more difficult now. If you want something you'll have to offer something in return.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Requests for help of a financial nature will come your way but if you are smart you will turn them all down. The best way to help others is to show them how to help themselves.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Someone in a position of authority is about to offer you the chance to move several rungs up the ladder of success. Before you proceed ask yourself a serious question: do you really want this level of responsibility?

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Your confidence may be soaring now but don't go to extremes. At best you will make a fool of yourself; at worst others will expect you to be like that all the time. Try not to forget it's only an act. Isn't it?

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may feel irrationally jealous today, which is not like you at all. The fact is your nerves are still on edge from the effects of the recent full moon, so stay calm and try to take nothing too seriously.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

The best way to avoid confrontation is to remove yourself from areas where it is most likely to take place. Everything will be fine if everyone respects your space – and, of course, you must respect theirs.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You may have a lot of practical issues on your plate at the moment but don't neglect your feelings – or the feelings of those you love. Make time for others today – and even more time for yourself.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

The Sun in Aries is bringing all sorts of opportunities your way – all you have to do is reach out and grab them. But don't be greedy: there is plenty of good stuff to go around.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may have to hide your true feelings if you want to avoid a scene. If you fall out with someone today they will be in a huff for weeks, so bite your lip and focus on things you can agree on.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Seek out people who are fun, people who make you laugh when you are feeling down. And don't think of it as wasting time, because it's nothing of the sort.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You may be tempted to rush around today and finish all those half-completed jobs you think are so important. Don't bother. If they really were that important you would have done them all by now.
